

PMI vs Compliance Inspections

Choosing the Right Plan for Your Lifting Equipment

What's the Difference?

If minimizing downtime, reducing emergency costs, and protecting your equipment investment are important to your operation, PMI is the right choice.

If your operation doesn't rely on its lifting equipment daily and only needs annual safety checks, a Compliance Inspection may be the better fit.

	Compliance Inspection	Preventative Maintenance Inspection
Purpose	Checks compliance only. No maintenance performed.	Ensures compliance while maintaining equipment to extend life & reduce downtime.
Scope of Inspection	Visual and audible only. No disassembly or cleaning.	Disassembly, cleaning, lubrication, & minor repairs included.
Repair Coverage	Inspection only.	Minor repairs that can be completed in 15 minutes are included. Brakes adjusted; oils topped up.
Service Documentation	Crane logbook updated + inspection report + quote.	Crane logbook updated + service + inspection reports + quote.
Best For	Meets annual safety requirements. Equipment not relied on in daily operations.	Operations seeking maximum uptime, safety, & equipment longevity.
